successes at this point—about fourteen miles south of Mukden—irreparable damage will have been done the Czar's forces. The railroad is being utilized principally at this time for the transportation of the wounded Russian soldiers and as many of their stores as they were able to save in their precipitate evacuation of Liao-Yang.

The first stand made by the flying Russians, as indicated by a dispatch received from Tokio today, was at Yen-Tu. Here the army of General Kuraki crashed against the Russians with such farer as to sweep them from the hills in an utter rout. Kuroki now occupies that position.

The latest dispatches disclose that the Russian commander has been completely out-manoeuvred by Field Marshal Oyama. Kuropatkin found himself trapped as he hurried northward over what he thought was a clear road.

It was the plan of the Russian General to crush Kuroki before the other Japanese divisions on the south side of the Taishan could cross to his support. This plan failed because a Japanese column of which the Russian commander apparently had absolutely no knowledge appeared further north.

Kuropatkin abandoned the idea of giving Kuroki battle, and hastened northward to prevent the unexpected Japanese column from cutting the railroad. Then he was amazed to find that still another Japanese column had escaped observation of his scouts was pushing directly on Mukden from the east.

The Russian general was compelled to send a force of cavalry forward to oppose this force. At the same time he learned that the Mikado's men were appearing in force at Sin-Min-Tung, west of Mukden, and another force had to be dispatched there.

REAR GUARD CUT TO PIECES.

This brilliant generalship on the part of the Japs allowed Okta and Nodzu's forces to swarm across the Taishan and fall upon the rear guard of the Russians with such force as to cut it to pieces. Much of this furious rear-guard onslaught told upon the army of General Stalberg, who managed to escape from the south side of the river, where he was abandoned by Kuropatkin, but not before his force of 25,000 men was nearly annihilated.

Covered as the Russians have been, one dispatch goes so far as to declare that the Czar's forces must either surrender or be annihilated by the indefatigable foe.

MUKDEN IS ABANDONED.

In such desperate straits are the Russians that all thought of making a stand at Mukden has been abandoned, and hurried preparations are making to retreat from there to Harbin. This, it is believed, will mean the abandonment of many supplies at that place.

According to a dispatch from Mukden today the commissariat and some columns of artillery forming the advance of the Russian forces arrived there, but did not stop. They kept on northward.

BATTLE STILL RAGING.

A dispatch from Yen Tai today says that heavy fighting is going on north of there. The Japanese, the dispatch says, are pressing northward along the ridges to the east of the railway. A number of skirmishes have occurred in this region, but the Russians did not stop to give battle to their pursuers.

The Mukden correspondent of the Russ repeats the report that the Russian authorities are preparing to abandon the city, and adds that the evacuation has already begun. The consistency is being transferred for the present to Harbin, as the interruption of the telegraph lines is believed possible.

In their hurried evacuation of Liao-Yang it has been learned that the Russians lost at least 10,000 men and more than 200 guns. Kuropatkin was also obliged to abandon immense amounts of stores. Following the Russian retreat Field Marshal Oyama's whole army was thrown across the Taishan in pursuit of the fleeing forces. As a result the rear guard has been crushed.

In the meantime Kuroki has been pushing northward, with the intention of heading Kuropatkin off. It is now believed that he has succeeded in getting between the Russians and Mukden. With Kuroki in front and Okta and Nodzu with their victorious armies in the rear another serious disaster to the Czar's men is imminent.

RUSSIANS ABANDON MUKDEN.
From St. Petersburg, comes the startling news that the Russians are preparing to evacuate Mukden and retreat to Harbin.

This is the first intimation that such a move is contemplated. If it proves to be true, it means the abandonment of the whole of southern Manchuria and the ending of the present campaign. In fact, should Mukden be evacuated there would be no point in watching the door of Mukden, with its army command, shut off from the outside world. The other half of the Russian army, however, would still be in a position to fight.

BURNS BRIDGES IN FLIGHT.
The official reports of the great battle at Mukden are being received in St. Petersburg. It is believed that the Russians will not be given out until a complete and final dispatch is received.

Drawn by R. C. Woodville for the Illustrated London News.

DESTRUCTION OF RUSSIAN BATTERY AT LIAO-YANG.

The terrible havoc for the Japanese gunners is emphasized in this drawing. From three sides the Mikado's artillerymen poured a deadly fire on this Russian battery, and it was soon out of action, its men killed or wounded. One of the dispatches from the Far East says that out of sixty gunners in one battery at Liao-Yang, forty were killed or wounded in thirty minutes. The flashes from one of the Japanese guns are seen in the extreme upper right of the picture, just where the hill breaks the sky line.

According to a dispatch from the world's greatest military power, the Russian army at Liao-Yang itself, it is believed in Tokyo that General Kuroki is not yet out of the woods. It is believed that the Japanese are not yet out of the woods. It is believed that the Japanese are not yet out of the woods. It is believed that the Japanese are not yet out of the woods.

SHATTERED ARMY IN FULL FLIGHT

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Russia's Manchurian army, under General Kuropatkin, is thoroughly beaten and in full retreat before the victorious Japanese, under Field Marshal Oyama.

Not only have the Russians fled from Liao-Yang, finally leaving Port Arthur to its fate, but it looks now as if they must abandon Mukden, too.

According to several advices from Mukden, received last night and this morning, the authorities say that that point would not be likely to prove tenable, and the evacuation has been planned, and will begin within a day or so.

The evacuation of Mukden means the abandonment of the whole of southern Manchuria and the retiring of the Russians to their Manchurian base, Harbin, 400 miles north of Mukden. Such a move might really prove disastrous, as the Russian soldiers are in no condition to make such a march, except in the earliest of stages, and according to present indications they would be compelled to conduct the retreat fighting rear guard battle the greater part of the way.

As a result it is generally believed that even should Kuropatkin be able to make Mukden without another serious reverse but a shattered remnant of his magnificent force would ever reach Harbin.

So far as the Japanese are concerned the evacuation of Mukden would mean commodious winter quarters for them, the control of a double track railway, and with everything in favor of strengthening their position by reinforcements and supplies, and the most thorough preparation for the reopening of the campaign when the hard winter is past.

General Kuropatkin is at present in the neighborhood of Yen-Tai, working his way toward Mukden as fast as possible, while engaged in extensive rear-guard actions. So fierce have these rear guard fights been that one report had it that a large part of the Russian rear had been practically wiped out. This report is not confirmed in any way, but it is known that Kuropatkin's losses up to September 4 had reached 16,000 and this is generally thought to be a most conservative estimate. The Japanese now have practically their entire army across the Taishan, and the various columns are spread out, hemming Kuropatkin in from the rear, and to the east, and, according to several reports from supposedly well-informed quarters another large force has been able to work to the west, and threatens the railroad from that direction. Several dispatches received from the neighborhood of Yen-Tai indicate that Kuroki's advance is now to the north of the Russian Army, and the railroad and line of retreat are seriously menaced by them as well.

The military expert of the London Times, commenting on the situation this morning, says he thinks that although General Kuropatkin has the start of his pursuers he is not yet out of the woods. Many of his regiments have been reduced to half their strength while those of Japan have been burned and are likely to be in a bad shape. The Russian rear guard, he says, is probably doomed, since if Kuropatkin is north of Yen Tai it means he could not afford to wait for the rear guard to join him.

"The pursuit," he adds, "will be conducted with little utmost energy by Kuroki's alert and dangerous force, and may well provide many surprises."

FOUR-DAY ASSAULT AT PORT ARTHUR

LONDON, Sept. 6.—While the Japanese armies in Manchuria are crushing the forces with Kuropatkin, the Mikado's divisions in Southern Liao-Yang are reworking their terrific onslaughts against Port Arthur.

News of tremendous attacks on the Russian citadel have been received from Chefoo, and emphasize the desperate plight of the beleaguered garrison.

According to reports today and yesterday, Stoeness's gallant band is now reduced to 12,000 active men. Losses in battle and by siege privation have reduced what was once 30,000 to nearly 25 per cent of the original force.

The latest general assault on the Russian position was on August 27, and lasted four days.

The Japanese then retired, except from Port-Chuang, which they have frankly seized.

TOTAL LOSSES WERE 11,000. The Japanese losses, according to the Russian estimate, were 8,000 during the four days from August 27 to August 31. The Russian losses are placed at 3,000. During the assault shells from the field guns and rifle bullets fell in the city. The Russian ships in the harbor participated occasionally in the firing.

SNELL TRIAL WILL BE HOT LEGAL BATTLE

Special to the Boston American.
NEW BEDFORD, Sept. 6.—How hard Angus Snell's lawyers are going to fight for his life was indicated at the opening session of his trial on a charge of murdering aged Villiam Rice, in the British County Courthouse, in this city, today.

As soon as Justice Alden and Scotland Yard ascended the bench and the case had been called Snell's counsel moved that the indictment be quashed on several technical grounds. The motion was promptly refused and the lawyers for the defense took an exception—the first of many that it is believed they propose to enter during the case, with a view of fighting the issue up to the Supreme Court if the jury finds their client guilty.

It will be a hard-fought case—perhaps the hardest fought in New Bedford since Lazarus Borden did battle for her life, and even more than a dozen years ago. Hugo A. Dalrymple, of Fall River, and Thomas A. Hanson, of this city, are all able criminal lawyers, and will have no state of local knowledge, anticipated that may serve to their advantage. That the attorneys will not be less thorough, Attorney General Swift, of Bristol County, who has prepared the case for the State, will in all probability make the opening argument for the prosecution and cross-examine the witnesses for the defense.

SMART SET OUT IN FORCE

Special to the Boston American.
NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 6.—The weather marked the first day of the Newport Horse Show at the Casino. The show was held early and the numerous display of games was a feature.

Everybody in the cottage colony seemed to be there, while Boston, Jamaica Narrow, Portland, Providence and other places sent many representatives, while a large number came especially from New York for the opening day.

The exhibits were splendid, the management perfect and the first day goes down as a remarkable success in every manner possible.

Richard Vanderbilt came in early from Sandy Point Farm with Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt. He had many exhibits and drove down with his wife and children for the opening of the show.
